

Bumper Harvest at Bombyx Sericulture Base

Updated in June 2019

In mid-June 2019, spring cocoon purchase at Bombyx sericulture base was almost completed. It was a bumper harvest.

To provide a better one-stop clothing service, in early 2018 PFGHL established Sichuan Bombyx Organic Agriculture Technology Ltd. (BOMBYX). Bombyx specializes in organic, ecological sericulture and silkworm breeding. After one year of development, the area of Bombyx sericulture base has reached 16,000 mu, and the core base occupies 10,000 mu. These fine fields greatly benefit local people who are elated about the harvest.

PFGHL made full use of the geographical advantages of Nanchong, engaged sericulture experts to provide professional training for silkworm farmers so that they can continuously improve their technical skills, ensuring the whiteness, size and high yield of spring cocoon. Staff on site were busy weighing the cocoon, measuring the level, completing registration and payment, and piling the cocoon by level. The higher cocoon quality and the satisfying price have notably improved the living standard of the farmers.

In addition, in the process of mulberry planting and silkworm breeding, Bombyx actively implements the production mode of regenerative organic agriculture: use organic fertilizer, reduce carbon emission, restore soil vitality, and protect local soil and water environment so that silkworms can grow in a green environment.

Bombyx attaches importance to every step of the entire production process in a bid to provide silk products with sustainability and cost performance. We appreciate the support and trust given to us by new and existing customers from all walks of society. We will continue to improve our entire garment supply chain and provide higher-quality and more convenient services!
